To whom it may concern:

The California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of 2010 (West's Ann. Cal. Civ. Code § 1714.43) requires select retailers in the State of California to disclose what actions, if any, they are taking to address human trafficking and slavery, auditing within the supply chain, compliance with local and international laws regarding slavery and human trafficking, internal accountability standards, and appropriate training.

As of the date of this letter, ADM is compliant with the requirements of the California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of 2010 (West's Ann. Cal. Civ. Code § 1714.43). All of the foregoing is subject to revocation on written notice.

ADM is active in international sustainability certification systems such as the RSPO, RTRS, ISCC, etc. These internationally recognized certification systems are including elements related to the issues listed above to varying degrees. For more information related to our sustainability programs, please visit www.adm.com/responsibility. In addition, ADM's Code of Conduct forbids employees from engaging in unlawful and unethical business transactions. More information regarding ADM's supply chain and Code-of-Conduct can be found at www.adm.com.

Sincerely,
