

ADM & the American Farmer

Standing with American Farmers. Connecting Crops to the World.

For over a century, ADM has linked harvest to home, working hand-in-hand with American farmers to connect their crops to global markets, strengthen U.S. agriculture, and support global food security. ADM has vast capabilities in the U.S. and globally spanning elevators, transportation, manufacturing and more. We are a long-term partner, helping farmers strengthen their operations today while preparing for tomorrow.

Rooted in America

Since its founding in 1902, ADM has been woven into the fabric of rural America. Across the heartland, our 18,000 U.S. colleagues are part of the communities we serve, working with tens of thousands of farmers to buy millions of tons of American crops each year. We also help farmers unlock value from every acre. From our broad range of farmer services to leading-edge digital tools like our Gradable technology platform, from our re:generations™ regenerative agriculture program to our connections to global markets, we equip growers with tools to strengthen their businesses and the resiliency of our ag and food value chains for generations to come.

Farmer Voices

"We have hauled grain to ADM for all my farming career. Our family has always been focused on taking care of the land for the next generation. We have always had a good relationship with ADM."

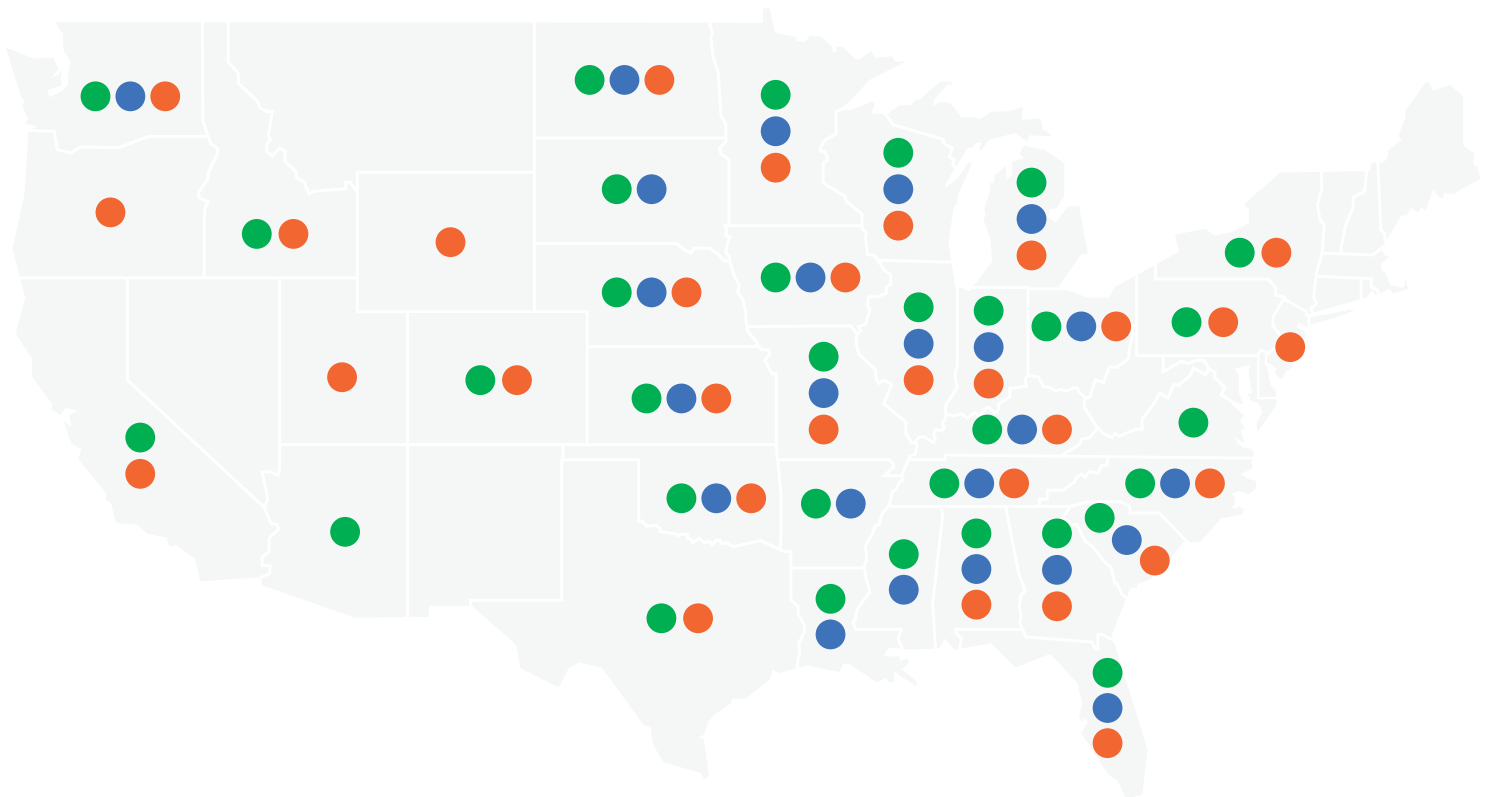

—Chuck Ruzicka, Nebraska

"I have a good relationship with ADM and their program allows me to pick-up some extra dollars for conservation, which benefits my operation for the long-term."

– David Piper, Michigan

"I am extremely appreciative and grateful to ADM for rewarding me and my operation."

– Andy Petersen, Iowa

U.S. Partnerships

ADM's U.S. footprint stretches across 36 states—supporting farmers through local origination, processing, and partnerships that build resilience for the future.
